- Research has substantiated that people who chewed fast were overweight and the people who chewed slowly, were closer to their ideal weight. When you chew, the enzymes in your saliva stimulate your digestive juices, which helps you metabolize food better. So when by chewing slowly, you extract more nutrients from the food, which makes your body feel more satisfied because it's absorbing the nutrition it As a result, you'll crave less junk food.

- To master the habit of chewing slower, chew your food about ten times. You'll be able to better enjoy the whole spectrum of tastes and aromas of the meal, which triggers cephalic phase digestive responses, which is just another way of saying that digestion actually begins in the brain. Your senses are enraptured by the sight, smell, and taste of food, and hence, the assimilation of the nutrients is far better.
- Keep that food journal close to you – When you are hungry, you will eat mindlessly, and hence go overboard on calories. If you go to a restaurant, you will end up having more than you thought of, as restaurants serve double the required amount for you. Maintain a food journal, so that you how many calories you have eaten, and are able to eat but mindfully.
- Take care of your hormones – More often than not, our hormones play a major role in initiating fat loss or weight loss. This is when the doctor steps in. You need to take help from the good doctor, who will give you a few tests to do, the results of which will guide you and help you understand your body better. It can be a weight loss plateau buster for you to try.
- Same way of eating – If you have been following a certain type of diet. It will do you good if you shift gears and changed to a different kind of eating pattern. This will amp up your metabolism, which has slowed down over the weeks. Overcoming a weight loss plateau can be tough, but with your eyes on the goal, you can achieve the impossible.

Set Things Right

Accepting that you have hit a weight-loss plateau is the biggest hurdle. As soon as you know that you have reached a weight-loss plateau, try to change things, exercise wise as well as your eating pattern. Try these exercises to rev up your metabolism and also to get past that dreaded plateau. These exercises are sure shot metabolism boosters. Try them and watch the scale of your weighing machine, once again.

Dumbbell Squat and Knee Pull

Grab your dumbbells, just the weight you are comfortable in so that you can continue with a few repetitions.

Method: Begin in a split stance with your right leg forward, your left heel lifted, holding dumbbells in front of your shoulders, elbows bent in by sides, palms facing in. Lower into a split squat, bend your knees and pushing hips back, as arms extend overhead. Press back up, bending elbows and lifting left knee up toward chest, balancing on right leg for 1 count. Return to start. Do 10 reps, and then repeat on opposite side.

Switch the Scissor

Get your heart rate up with this killer move. A change from your regular walks on the treadmill, this exercise should break not only your plateau but also your boredom from doing your regular, mundane stuff.

Method: Begin in a lunge with your right leg forward, your left arm extended overhead (palm facing in) and right arm down by side. Jump straight up, switching your arms and legs midair, landing in a lunge with your left leg forward and right arm extended overhead. Repeat this as quickly as possible for about 30 seconds. Take rest for 10 seconds before repeating.

Side Plank Rise Up

Rev up your side-planks, with this workout. It will work your abdomen like nothing else would.

Method: Lie on your right side with right forearm on the ground angled front and left hand behind head. Your hips should be one on top of other, right knee bent under the left. Keep your abs engaged and think of pressing the right side of your ribcage away from the floor. Press down through right palm and extend your left arm. Keeping left arm extended, lift hips off the floor and extend right leg, crossing it behind left into a full side plank, reaching left arm to the ceiling and looking up to the hand. Hold for 1 count, and then gently lower back to starting position. Do 15 reps on one side before repeating on opposite side.

Squat Jump Over

This one is a more difficult version of the squat jump. This is a wonderful exercise to challenge your body.

Method: Stack dumbbells about 1 foot in front of you on the floor. Perform a squat thrust by lowering into a squat, quickly placing hands on the floor, and jumping legs out into full plank position. This is pretty similar to a burpee move.

Jump your legs back into a squat and immediately lift hands off the floor and jump up and over the dumbbells, bending knees, tucking your heels into the body, and swinging arms in front of chest to help you jump higher. Land on the other side of the dumbbells and repeat squat thrust.

Repeat as quickly as possible, jumping back and forth over dumbbells, for 30 seconds. Rest for 10 seconds before starting all over again.

Bridge and Chest Press

Grab your dumbbells and give your regular chest press a thorough twist, with this move.

Method: Grab a pair of dumbbells and lie face up, holding the weights above your chest with arms extended, palms facing in. Your feet should be hip-width apart, lift your heels. Bend elbows in by sides, palms facing in, pressing them down into the floor as hips lift up into the bridge, keeping your heels lifted. Return to start. Do 15 reps.

Bodyweight Circuit

This circuit can be a great replacement, for your treadmill or cross-trainer. The best part is, it challenges your body and hence helps you to shed weight. A good way to break your weight-loss plateau is by doing this challenging exercise.

Method: Perform the following four moves as a circuit: Do one for 20 seconds, rest for 10 seconds, and then move on to the next. Repeat twice. To increase the difficulty level, do the exercises for 30 seconds but keep the resting time the same. This will take about five minutes.

1. Speed Squat: With feet hip-width apart, bend your knees to 90 degrees, keeping your chest upright. Return to standing as quickly as possible.
2. Squat Thrust: With your feet hip-width apart, bend your knees to place your hands on the ground and jump your feet back into a pushup position. Quickly reverse to return to standing.
3. Mountain Climber: From a push-up position, quickly bring alternating knees toward your chest.
4. Speed Skip: Skip in place, quickly bringing alternating knees up toward your chest.

Four Corner Walk

This workout should help you shed the additional weight you have been trying so hard to shed. This should challenge you to make you out of breath but at the end of it all, it will be all worth it.

Method: Place two cones 10 yards apart. Holding a pair of heavy dumbbells, do one to three sets of the following sequence. Rest two to four minutes between sets. (To challenge your calves, walk on the balls of your feet.)

1. Standing at one cone, do eight to 10 bent-over rows: Hold a pair of dumbbells and bend forward, arms hanging straight. Pull the weights to the sides of your chest.
2. Walk to the other cone and do eight to 10 biceps curls: Hold weights by your sides, palms facing forward, and slowly raise them to your shoulders.
3. Walk back to the first cone and do eight to 10 squats: Hold weights at shoulders and bend your knees to 90 degrees, keeping your chest upright.
4. Return to the second cone and do eight to 10 overhead presses: With weights at your shoulders, bend your knees slightly then push the weights directly overhead. Walk back to the start.
